POLITICAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES

Last Updated: January 17, 2023

Analog Devices (Analog or the Company) engages in the political process to the extent such engagement advances the long-term interests of the company and shareholders. Analog Government Affairs is responsible for managing Analog’s public policy issues and government affairs activities worldwide. When participating in particular public policy discussions, Analog Government Affairs pursues objectives that are beneficial to the semiconductor industry as a whole, as well as Analog’s growth and business operations, such as supply chain resiliency, advanced research technology and innovation, intellectual property rights and protection, and environmental and other green initiatives. Additionally, Analog Government Affairs is focused on issues impacting the locations and communities in which it operates, and its employees reside.

Analog is committed to strong management, oversight and transparency when reporting the Company’s engagement with government officials at all levels, and we consistently seek to provide our shareholders with relevant information regarding public policy engagement.

Political Contributions

Analog does not make contributions of any kind, whether monetary or “in-kind” (e.g., employee time, the provision of goods or services), to political parties or candidates, including any direct contributions by Analog through any intermediary organizations, such as political action committees (PACs) or lobbyists, campaign funds, or trade or industry associations and super PACs. This policy applies in all countries and across all levels of government, even where such contributions are permitted by law. In the future, if ADI makes any such contributions, we would disclose them on this website and as required by applicable campaign finance disclosure requirements.

Public Policy Expenditures and Advocacy

Analog engages in advocacy on issues of importance to the semiconductor industry, as well as to its business, customers, shareholders and employees. Through its advocacy activities, Analog only seeks to inform and influence government action on issues that affect the semiconductor industry and our business, customers, shareholders or employees and only through specifically authorized and legally compliant activities. All Analog advocacy activities require the prior approval of Analog’s Government Affairs and Analog’s Chief Legal Officer. Where required by law, Analog files lobbying disclosure reports with federal, state and local governments with respect to its advocacy activities.

In fiscal 2022, Analog made no contributions or other expenditures meant to influence the outcome of ballot measures. As of September 30, 2022, we had had an aggregate of $140,000 in reportable federal lobbying expenditures.

Trade Associations and Industry Coalitions

Analog belongs to a number of trade associations and industry coalitions worldwide, representing the interests of the technology industry, of industries in which Analog operates and of the broader business community. These organizations work to bring about industry consensus and advocacy on major public policy issues.
Analog’s participation in trade associations, including membership on a trade association board, does not mean that the company agrees with every position a trade association takes on an issue. Indeed, from time-to-time Analog’s public policy positions may differ from those of the trade association of which we are members.

For fiscal 2022, in the United States, the principal trade associations and industry coalitions in which Analog held membership were as follows:

- Semiconductor Industry Association
- Open RAN Policy Coalition
- Semiconductor Research Corporation

Analog does not hold a membership in any 501(c)(4) organizations.

Employee Public Service and Political Activity

Analog’s employees have the right and are encouraged to pursue personal interests, including active participation in the political process in their communities. If Analog employees choose to participate in political activity, they do so as individuals and not company representatives. Analog employees who voluntarily participate in campaign activities must do so on their own time, or by taking paid time off or an unpaid leave of absence.

Compliance and Oversight

Analog’s Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee (NCGC) has oversight over policies and practices in connection with government affairs, public policy and related activities and expenditures. Analog’s management provides quarterly reports to the NCGC on such policies, practices, and activities.
